of March, so far as the credit of the city of Washington is concerned, will depend upon the artent to which those who happen to find themselves intrusted with the duty of conducting the customery ceremonies recognize the fact that this city, and not they themselves or the iocal representatives of any political party or of any particular faction of a political party,-to the heat of the occasion. In inaugurations, as in encompanents, conclaves and other great gatherings of people at the capital, the public-large sums of money, which they place in the hands of a body of representative citizens whom they trust, to spend in the customary methods of municipal hospitality. According as this committee representing the contributing citizens is faithful to its trust, and shows executive ability, tact, energy and business-like methods, in that proportion the expenditures are judicious, the affair well arranged and Washington's high reputation as an entertainer on such occasions is preserved undiminished. In respect to the inis managed means either a highly popular affair, attractive to the multitude, creditable to the city, and lightening the financial burden upon the directly subscribing portion of the community, or a failure in itself, a discredit to the host of the occasion, and a heavy pecuniary drain upon the inauguration subscribers. If at either a resultions or a demogratic inauguration only the Washingtonians of the victorious party, or only that small fraction of the community which is active in politics on either side, should decorate houses and places of business, entertain guests, contribute to the inauguration fund and invest in inentertains. Washington spends its money, and augural ball tickets, or if the managers instead of co-operating and laboring unselfishly for the local welfare should act as wrangling, jenious, backbiting politicians, each struggling to exalt himself and depreciate his colleagues, the result for the city could not fail to be a dismal and mortifying failure. Washington in suggesting who shall conduct its entertainment, how its guests are to be entertained, and how its money is to be spent. Of course the national committee of the prevailing political party in any election has no more, in reason, to do with the affair than the King of Siam. By common consent, however, in recent inaugurations, the chairman of that committee has been recognized as a sort of necessary arbiter to quiet dissensions among citizens and to designate a nucleus about which the inauguration committee may form. Some good and no special harm may result from a continuance of this practice, if both the national committee and the citizens appointed by it recognize the strictly limited capacity in which the chairman of the national committee acts, and proceed in all matters on broad local lines, and not on political or politico-factional lines. Otherwise nothing but unmixed evil can follow. With that tact and fine discrimination which characterize the skilled entertainer Washington will always put conspicuously to the front republican representative citizens in the inauguration of a republican president and demoexatic representative citizens in the inauguration of a democratic president. But they are to CHRISTMAS SPRIGS. be designated primarily as representative citizens not as politicians, they are appointed to plan and work and spend judiciously trust money for the glory of the city, not to cut a figure before the incoming president and to dispense for him the local patronage. And it is well to remember that there is more than one case of record where men have worked ably president and not this community was to it have found the fruits of their labors to be Dead

The good people who have no realizing sense of Christmas until the odors of roast turkey and other savory edibles fill the seasonably decerated dining rooms miss countless oppor tunities for doing the charitable things which make Christmas the greatest of all festivals. To properly celebrate the day and its memories the benevolently-inclined should start out now se that provision may be made for the comfort and pleasure of those unfortunate ones who without such aid would find in the holiday season nothing more than increased inclination toward discontent and grief. Fo several days past thousands of boys and girls have enjoyed membership in THE EVENING STAR Santa Cleus Club, an organization which proposes to do as much good as the means at its command will permit. Every member of the club, now numbering, it is estimated, between twelve and fifteen thousand, has contributed ten cents and the resultant fund of between $1,200 and $1,500, is gratifyingly large, but there is so much to be done in the way of relieving actual distress that the amount is evidently insufficient. Now let the children of a large growth do their share; let them supplement the great work done by the little ones. let them give with all possible liberality either each, or clothing or provisions or fuel. If the giving calls for a little self-denial then so much more creditable will be the gift. In the new columns of today's STAR will be found a list of depots where the citizens who desire to bestow charity may leave their donations. Do not delay an hour in your giving, for after the goods are in there is much to do in the way of assorting and delivering the great produet of local benevolence. It will be the club's duty to see that everything confided sto its care is properly bestowed upon worthy people; its organization is complete. So send in your offerings anything from cents to great big checks, from single garments to suits of clothing; overcosts, shawis, cloaks, dolls, food, tops, firewood, shoes, coal. Everything will 's welcomed by the club and appreciated by the ultimate recipients. A little timely enthusiasm will give the poor of this city a happy Christmas and make glad the hearts of all who have exerted themselves to make it so. Mrs. Lease may not be able to secure a seat in the Senate, but there is no constitutional provision which would prevent her from becoming mother of the regiment in the new populist military organization. The cotton crop in India suffered severely because of the November drought, but the damwe closed out from a leading cloar we closed out from a leading cloar with what happened to republican wool about that same time.
